We care

Almost half of Oregon is forestland.

We keep it that way.

We replant

Oregon forest landowners plant
over 40 million trees
every year. By hand.

The background image shows a vast forest landscape with rolling hills and mountains under a cloudy sky. In the lower-left foreground, there is a cleared area where many young trees are being planted, indicating a sustainable logging practice.

We are sustainable

Landowners nurture our forests to protect this renewable resource for future generations.

We are high-tech

Modern forestry,
logging and mill
equipment reduce environmental impacts,
increase efficiency and minimize waste.

A photograph showing the construction of a tall wooden skyscraper. Three workers in safety gear are visible: one worker is on a diagonal wooden beam on the left side, another is on a horizontal beam in the middle ground, and a third worker in a yellow vest is standing on a vertical wooden column on the right side. A large wooden beam is being hoisted by a crane above them. The background shows a clear blue sky and some green trees.

We are innovative

Advances in wood engineering allow us to build wooden skyscrapers.

Oregon leads this timber-construction revolution.

Oregon's forest protection laws help protect water and conserve habitat.

We are 97% compliant with these regulations.

We follow regulations

OregonForests.org/ForestProud

We conserve habitat

Oregon forest landowners have helped restore more than 7,900 miles of streams for fish in the past 20 years.

OregonForests.org/ForestProud

We protect water

Oregon's forests filter the majority of our drinking water.

A close-up photograph of dark, textured tree bark. A bright red ribbon is wrapped diagonally around the trunk, with the words "STREAMSIDE MANAGEMENT ZONE" printed in black capital letters across its surface.

We harvest responsibly

Responsible harvesting has allowed Oregon's total forestland to remain at 30 million acres for more than 60 years.

We use
herbicides
safely

Sparing and infrequent herbicide use gives seedlings a head start to grow into a new forest.

A firefighter in a yellow vest and hard hat is spraying water on a large wildfire. The fire is intense, with bright orange and yellow flames engulfing trees and brush. The firefighter is positioned on the left side of the frame, facing right. The background is filled with smoke and the glow of the fire.

We fight fires

Forest workers
prevent and fight
wildfires.

They also help make forests more resistant
to future fires.

We make great products

Oregon is the nation's top producer of softwood lumber and plywood, a record we've held for more than 25 years.
